

Building Collaborative Capacity of Conservation Practitioners

64 conservation practitioners from the private and public sectors in the American West identified the critical skills and tools, preferred delivery methods, and challenges for building collaborative capacity amongst their peers.

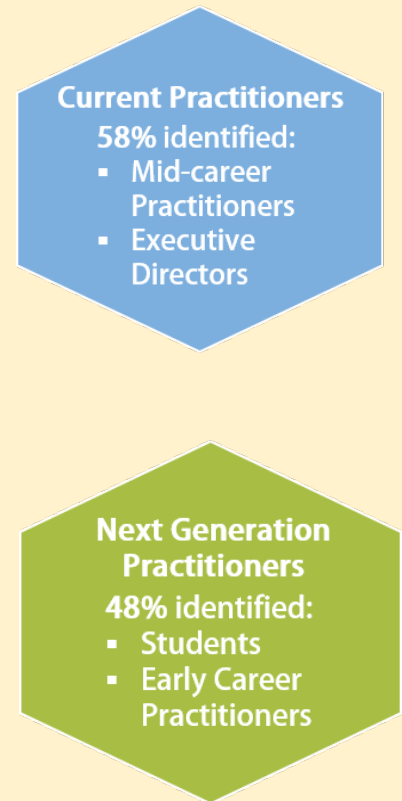

Top Collaborative Skills and Tools

Preferred Methods for Learning Skills & Accessing Tools

Who Needs These Skills & Tools?

Taking Action to Build Collaborative Capacity of Conservation Practitioners

The Center for Collaborative Conservation will work with practitioners and partners to design and implement learning opportunities to close the gap in collaborative capacity.

Current Practitioners

Next Generation Practitioners

To access the full report, please visit: www.collaborativeconservation.org/practitionerneedsassessment

To learn more about the needs assessment and ask questions, please contact: Heather Knight, 970-631-7645, heather.knight@colostate.edu