

SAVE THE DATE

Western Collaborative Conservation Network invites you to attend:

WCCN's Inaugural "Confluence 2020"

The Western Collaborative Conservation Network (WCCN) promotes & supports community-based collaborative conservation efforts to strengthen and sustain healthy landscapes, vibrant communities and thriving economies.

Confluence: a coming or flowing together, joining, meeting place, gathering, a point of mixing.

At The Confluence, members of community-based collaborative conservation groups, their conservation support organizations and partners (see list of participants below) will gather from across the West to:

- Connect to peers in interactive poster & open space sessions, to co-learn through shared case studies, network to discover & develop new collaborations, & build a stronger collective voice for collaborative conservation
- Convene in peer-to-peer & expert-led learning sessions to build collaboration skills and practice collaboration tools. Topics: finance, fundraising, storytelling, collaboration 101, facilitation, leadership, partnerships.
- Catalyze action in working sessions on critical regional capacity issues to build more support for on-the-ground conservation success. Sessions: public policy, regional funding capacity, organizational and collaborative capacity building.

March 10-12, 2020
Colorado State University

Details & Early Bird Registration
Coming Sept 2019

Contact: Heather Knight, Associate Director of Practice, Center for Collaborative Conservation, heather.knight@colostate.edu www.collaborativeconservation.org/program/practice/

The Confluence 2020 - co-conveners

